Darrell Steinberg, Mayor, City of Sacramento / Founder, Steinberg Institute

Mayor and former State Senate President Pro Tem Darrell, Steinberg is a powerful and effective advocate for mental health care policy in California. He has a long history of championing policy issues affecting brain health, and has gained the respect and trust of providers, decision-makers, business leaders and advocacy organizations across the state and nation.

Darrell has worked to bring awareness and solutions for what he calls “the under-attended issue of our time.” As a member of the state Assembly, he authored the 2004 Mental Health Services Act, landmark legislation that now generates $2.4 billion annually for “whatever-it takes” services for individuals with the most severe brain illnesses, as well as innovative programs and research focused on early detection, intervention, and prevention of psychosis and serious mood disorders.

His commitment to improving mental health care has resulted in services that provide integrated care to the homeless. In 2013, as a state senator, Darrell authored SB 82, propelling a major statewide expansion of crisis residential and stabilization beds and mobile crisis capacity. In 2015, continuing his press for change, he established a first-of-its-kind statewide organization, the Steinberg Institute, dedicated to raising the profile of quality mental health care as a critical public policy and civil rights issue. In February 2019, Governor Gavin Newsom appointed Darrell to co-lead a new statewide Commission on Homelessness and Supportive Housing.

Andrew Imparato, Executive Director, Disability Rights California

Andrew J. “Andy” Imparato began work in February of 2020 as the Executive Director of Disability Rights California (DRC) after a high impact 26-year career in Washington, DC in disability advocacy and policy. DRC is the federally funded legal services agency that serves Californians with all types of disabilities across the age spectrum. Since joining DRC, Imparato has led advocacy efforts to protect the California disability community from health and economic impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic, helped shape Governor Newsom’s Master Plan for Aging as part of his Administration’s Stakeholder Advisory Committee, and has worked to position California as a national leader on competitive integrated employment for people with disabilities. In February, he was appointed by President Biden to be one of 12 public members of a federal COVID-19 Health Equity Task Force.

While in DC, Imparato served as the Disability Policy Director for Chairman Tom Harkin on the US Senate Committee on Health, Education, Labor and Pensions; as President and CEO of the American Association of People with Disabilities; as Executive Director of the Association of University Centers on Disabilities; as General Counsel and Director of Policy at the National Council on Disability, and as an attorney advisor to Commissioner Paul Steven Miller at the US Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. He was a key leader in the coalition that came together to support the ADA Amendments Act in 2008 and helped negotiate the disability provisions in the Workforce Innovation and Opportunities Act of 2014.

Imparato represented the disability rights community on the Executive Committee of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights from 2003-2010 and is a member of the National Advisory Committee for the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation's Health Policy Research Scholars. He chaired the planning committee for 4 international summits on disability employment between 2016 and 2020, organized by Senator Harkin's Institute at Drake University; is on the Centene National Disability Advisory Committee (Centene is a Fortune 100 Medicaid Managed Care Company based in St. Louis), and is on the Board of Directors of the Kennedy Krieger Institute in Baltimore, Maryland.

Imparato grew up in Southern California, received a B.A. in Humanities from Yale College in 1987, and is a 1990 graduate of Stanford Law School. Imparato is known for mentoring diverse emerging leaders with disabilities and likes to cultivate activism on social media. His perspective is informed by his lived experience with bipolar disorder. He has received a number of honors and awards, including the Ten Outstanding Young Americans Award from the US Junior Chamber of Commerce; the Henry Viscardi Achievement Award from the Viscardi Center in New York; the Corey Rowley National Advocacy Award from the National Council on Independent Living; and the Secretary's Highest Achievement Award from Secretary of Health and Human Services Mike Leavitt. He has received appointments to the Maryland Statewide Independent Living Council from Maryland Governors Ehrlich and O'Malley and to the California State Council on Developmental Disabilities from Governor Newsom. He was also appointed by US Senator Tom Daschle to the bipartisan Ticket to Work and Work Incentives Advisory Panel, where he helped develop new models for disability benefits that did not create barriers to employment.

Susan Shaw Goodman, Attorney at Law, Retired

Susan Goodman, a long-time mental health advocate, does not represent a particular organization but speaks on behalf of those suffering with a serious mental illness (SMI) and their caregivers.

After starting a career as a teacher (foreign relations and French), Susan retired from teaching to pursue a career practicing law as a Deputy District Attorney (DA) in Los Angeles. She moved north and worked as the chief Deputy DA in Yolo County. She was always struck by the fact that the defendant's mental health never seemed to be a focal point despite obvious evidence. From Yolo she went to the Sacramento DA's office and was soon recruited by the Assembly Public Safety Committee where she became Chief Counsel.

A few years after adopting two children, Susan retired from the practice of law professionally, turning her passion and efforts to local politics, eventually being elected to the Folsom Cordova School Board. Susan has been past president of NAMI-Sacramento and has been a recent team leader in the fight for adoption of Laura's Law in Sacramento. She lives at home with her adult son who suffers from schizophrenia, and she has experienced first-hand the challenges of caring for an adult child with mental illness. Once her son was willing to accept treatment, about 6 years ago, she and he have been personally using the LPS system.
